Hygienic - sparkling - easy to clean - XINOX, the new range of stainless-steel sanitary products from FRANKE with INOXplus finishing treatment
– Ideal for the equipping of bathroom facilities that need to reflect the prestige of public, semi-public and private buildings.

The new surface treatment used on the XINOX sanitary range from FRANKE simply shrugs off water, and dirt and renders fingerprints virtually invisible.

The elegant appearance, coupled with toughness and robustness, of stainless steel has for long been a convincing argument in favour of using this material in public sanitary facilities in particular. The new XINOX range from FRANKE now adds a further argument to the list. The reason: the INOXplus special surface treatment.

This is not just a simple coating process, but a sophisticated finishing treatment that involves the combining of minute nano-sized particles with the molecules of the stainless steel, evening out the microscopic imperfections in its surface. The fine structure that this produces makes fingerprints virtually invisible. The surface shrugs off water and soiling in the form of pearl-like droplets, thus ensuring that sanitary elements treated with INOXplus are always clean and hygienic and considerably reducing the amount of care and cleaning required.

The new XINOX range of sanitary products from FRANKE includes more than fifty items – all designed with full, harmonious, mutual compatibility in mind. The entire range of products has been endorsed at ISH 2003 in Frankfurt, Germany with the highly esteemed DESIGN-Plus award.

Designed for the equipping of bathroom facilities that need to reflect the prestige of the buildings in which they are installed, this range of products includes elegant, freestanding washbasins, mirror assemblies, individual washbasins, WCs and urinals – along with their corresponding fittings and accessories, such as towel and soap dispensers, waste bins, shelves and various types of bar, peg and hook for hanging towels and items of clothing on.

The elegant XINOX range is thus the ideal solution for the equipping of sanitary facilities in an extensive range of locations that includes top international hotels and restaurants, wellness and fitness centres, theatres and concert halls, and airports – and in the customer washroom and toilet facilities of all manner of service enterprise.
