

Press Release

October 2008

MIRANIT -

The name for a new composite granite material

MIRANIT, a new composite granite material, is a unique combination of strength and design capabilities used to create a new generation of washbasins. This material is a stable compound consisting of natural minerals and a high-quality unsaturated polyester resin.

MIRANIT, the mineral material is specifically designed to meet the requirements of commercial and public sanitary facilities. Due to its exceptional moulding properties, this resin-bonded mineral material can be formed into any shape with small radii of just 2 mm, even when thin material thicknesses are required. With this material, MIRANIT washbasins offer a completely new approach to the design of wash areas, because in spite of their flat and elegant impressions the washbasins provide high durability.

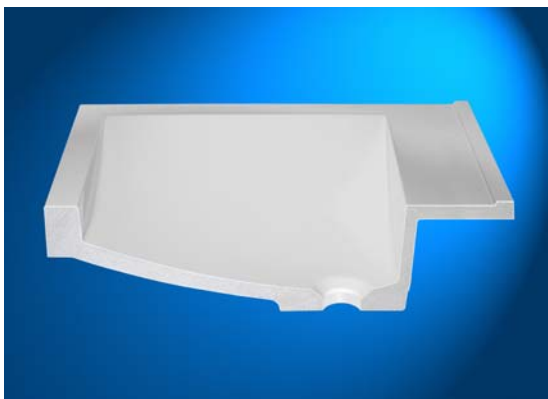

The stable and fracture-resistant material has a smooth, pore-free and high-gloss exterior skin. The Gelcoat layer that provides the Alpine White colour is easy to clean, impact resistant, non-abrasive and offers good resistance to alkalines and acids. Even water temperatures up to 80°C will not harm the Gelcoat surface.

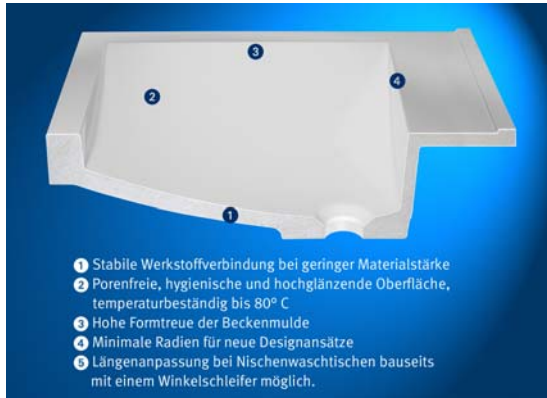

No matter if clear, functional lines or harmonious, natural shapes for modern design in sanitary rooms: The design variations made of MIRANIT provide the perfect solutions for everyone. Depending on the installation requirements, MIRANIT washbasins are available as single, double and triple units and can also be formed with extended flat areas to fit into recesses between two walls.

All washbasins variants are very well suited for combining with manual self-closing or electronic taps and the stainless steel washroom accessories also available in the extensive Franke range of products.

Please send a copy of use if distributing this document

Further information:

*Mag. (FH) Christian Marte
Head of Marketing, Corporate Activity WS
Franke Ges.m.b.H, Oberer Achdamm 50, A-6971 Hard
Tel ++43 5574 6735 302
Fax ++43 5574 62411
Email: christian.marte@franke.com*